Attachment A

UCCE Program Provided by University

University will issue an annual Plan of Work with detailed and specific descriptions of UCCE programs for County in the coming program year and a Report of Work for the year prior. These programs will serve the residents of Mendocino County by providing science-based research, education and public service that will promote solutions to problems in agriculture, natural resources (including environmental quality), food and nutrition, food safety and youth development.

In the course of their work, UCCE advisors (University academics) and program representatives (University staff) will deliver a range of locally relevant programs focusing on farming, the environment, nutrition, 4-H youth development, science literacy and Master Gardeners. Advisors and program representatives will use workshops, public meetings, newsletters, the mass media and other communication tools to bring needed information to County. Further, advisors and program representatives will use collaborations with government and private agencies to extend the reach of their programs. Finally, advisors and program representatives may collaborate with UC campus-based Cooperative Extension program Specialists and Agricultural Experiment Station scientists to research, adapt and field-test agricultural improvements or solutions and promote the use of research findings in County.

UCCE and County recognize the value of integrating research-based expertise into County's project planning and resource allocation processes. As such, County may consult UCCE advisors during the development of project proposals, RFPs, or grant solicitations in areas that align with UCCE's mission and expertise. UCCE's participation in these consultations will be evaluated based on the potential for mutual benefit and resource availability. This collaboration aims to ensure that County leverages the most current research and technical expertise available and allows UCCE advisors to identify areas where they may contribute directly to project outcomes, providing cost savings to the County and enhancing UCCE's research and extension mission.

UCCE may, upon request from the County, provide technical expertise and advisory services during emergency situations, including but not limited to, natural disasters, environmental contamination, or public health concerns. UCCE's involvement will be limited to its areas of expertise, such as soil and water testing, agricultural impact assessments, and providing research-based recommendations for recovery and mitigation efforts. UCCE's role will be advisory in nature and will not include direct emergency response or public safety responsibilities. Coordination with County departments will be required to ensure that UCCE's assistance is within the scope of its mission and resources.

Subject to availability of required resources, UCCE would implement programs with the following areas of emphasis.

Agriculture and Natural Resources: Research and education programs that meet local agriculture and natural resource needs, focused on enhancing the agricultural productivity and competitiveness of Mendocino County and protecting water, land and air resources. Together with farmers, pest control advisors and industry representatives, current and emerging agricultural opportunities and problems would be identified.

Nutrition, Family and Consumer Sciences: Offering opportunities for families, individuals, and youth to enhance their quality of living by providing resources that support independence and self-sufficiency, health maintenance and obesity/diabetes prevention. These advisors may also provide information on food safety, food preparation, food preservation and budgeting for food security.

Master Gardeners: University-trained volunteers providing advice and support for local gardeners. Through volunteers, advisors overseeing the UCCE Master Gardener Program will extend research-based information about home horticulture and pest management to the residents of Mendocino County.

4-H Program: Encompassing a wide variety of educational and enrichment experiences to help young people discover and develop their potential. 4-H Youth Development Program advisors provide meaningful, learn-by-doing educational activities to children in 4-H clubs and/or to children participating in school enrichment and after-school programs. Citizenship and science literacy including biology, math and engineering are thrusts of the program.

Tribal Nations Collaborations: University plans to enter into separate agreements with federally recognized tribal nations within Mendocino County boundaries. These agreements will focus on supporting the unique needs and priorities of tribal nations in areas such as natural resource management, traditional land use, agriculture, and environmental conservation. UCCE will consult with Tribal nations to ensure that programs and services align with their cultural practices and environmental goals. Tribal nations will be fully respected as sovereign entities, and their participation in joint projects will require their express consent. Where appropriate, UCCE may facilitate collaboration between the County and Tribal nations on joint projects, particularly in areas such as watershed management, fire resilience, and agriculture. However, this collaboration will only occur with the consent of all parties involved.
