

Dear Board;

I agree with the man who went to Costco and saw only 50% of folks wearing masks. I just went shopping at my ONLY open tiny store for miles. Shopkeeper not wearing a mask. A young maskless woman bounded up to chat up close (like 4 inches away) with her (masked) friend while a frightened elderly gentleman (masked) backed off. I felt for him— the most vulnerable.

I felt angry and hurt that while all of us were doing our bit, this young woman felt free to do whatever willy nilly. It felt like a violation of all,of,our (politely kept) personal spaces. Had this been Florida, I could easily have imagined her partying away in the beaches and bars.

Writing this not so much to point fingers but if we are asked to do a thing let's DO it. I am 100% down with making this mandatory, provided these masks do help, and are not a breeding ground for germs.
