

Hello!

I'm requesting that bookstores and perhaps other nonessential businesses be allowed to offer curbside pickup as soon as possible.

We are able to do 100% no-contact sales, with people ordering and paying by phone or online and picking up from a rack outside our store. I believe it carries significantly LESS risk than ordering books and other merchandise for home delivery, either from us or from big businesses that are continuing to operate warehouses even as their workers get sick.

We are able to offer this service without exposing our employees to each other or the public. We also normally employ 10 people, and being allowed to operate this way would increase the likelihood of surviving to rehire them. Thanks for considering it.
