

Please lend your weight to enforcing the face mask ordinance, with allowance for appropriate reminders of exactly what is required.

There is considerable confusion on behalf of generally reasonable people about whether masks are to be worn outside in situations where distancing is possible. The rub is that distancing often doesn't happen. Whatever the rules are, they need to be clear. We also need clear messaging that: 1) anyone can be carrying the virus without knowing it, and 2) masks are known to reduce the spread and save lives.

Wendy A. Roberts