Summary of Request:

Convening planning staff, supervisors, builders, and the public in a single workshop is a best practice that promotes open communication and collaborative problem-solving. By providing a platform where each stakeholder can share their unique perspectives and understandings, it directly addresses and minimizes misunderstandings and conflicts arising from disparate views. This approach not only fosters a shared sense of purpose and understanding among all parties but also enables the collective development of innovative and comprehensive solutions to systemic challenges. The inclusive nature of this dialogue ensures that solutions are widely acceptable and that actions going forward are based on a mutual and clear understanding of objectives and constraints, leading to more efficient project execution and reduced likelihood of conflict
